Wimbledon Boss Jokes Security Would Stop Disruptive Influencers

From: BBC Tennis Mined: 2026-10-11 3 min read

Wimbledon's boss joked that military guards at the tennis club would love to "sort out" social media influencers who interrupt matches. He also said influencers still matter for marketing today.

The talk follows a problem at the U.S. Open, where about 100 influencers got special passes. A photo shoot during a Naomi Osaka match stopped play and started a debate about manners at tennis. Star Coco Gauff said new fans are welcome but should follow the sport's etiquette.

Wimbledon's Atkinson said the club has no official "influencer" pass group. Brand partners may bring creators, but they would be closely watched. He likes Wimbledon's quiet tradition of fans respecting the game.

Fans may not bring portable ring lights. Atkinson said a total ban on influencers would be silly, but Wimbledon will handle them "in a Wimbledon way" to keep the tournament's special feel.

Word Treasure

influencers -- People who make social media content that others follow.

etiquette -- Polite rules for how to behave during a tennis match.

Wimbledon -- A famous tennis tournament in England.

ring lights -- Round lights creators use to brighten their faces on camera.

closely watched -- Carefully supervised so people follow the rules.

Background you need

Wimbledon is a famous tennis event known for quiet, respectful crowds.

Social media influencers make videos and photos that can promote sports--or interrupt them.

Tennis etiquette asks fans to stay still and quiet during points.

Break it down

WHO: Wimbledon's boss Atkinson and player Coco Gauff
WHAT: A joke and plan about controlling disruptive influencers
WHERE: Comments about Wimbledon after a U.S. Open interruption
WHY: Keep tennis etiquette while still using social media marketing

Why it matters

Kids can talk about how online fame and real-world manners should share sports spaces.

Test what you remember

1. Which event's boss joked about influencers?

(A) A chess picnic
(B) A spelling bee
(C) The Super Bowl only
(D) Wimbledon

2. What disrupted a Naomi Osaka match?

(A) A Moon power outage
(B) An influencer photo shoot
(C) A missing net forever
(D) Indoor snow

3. What did Coco Gauff say to follow?

(A) No rules at all
(B) Cooking recipes
(C) Only loud music rules
(D) The etiquette of the sport

4. What item is banned for fans at Wimbledon in this story?

(A) All water forever
(B) All shoes
(C) All hats
(D) Portable ring lights

5. How would brand influencers be handled?

(A) Banned from London
(B) Tightly chaperoned
(C) Made the umpires
(D) Free to film mid-point

6. Did Atkinson want a total influencer ban?

(A) No; he called a total ban nonsense
(B) He banned tennis
(C) He cancelled Wimbledon
(D) Yes forever with no marketing

Answer key (try the quiz first!): 1: D 2: B 3: D 4: D 5: B 6: A

Questions to think about

1. Atkinson: Jokes security would stop mid-match broadcasts but still wants carefully managed creators.
2. Coco Gauff: Welcomes new fans if they follow tennis etiquette.

MY THOUGHTS (at least 20 words):