The Voice: Four-Chair Turn Cade Mower Moves On After Battle Round

From: Billboard Mined: 2026-10-27 5 min read

Cade Mower is still singing on The Voice. On Monday night, October 26, the 35-year-old singer from Bluffdale, Utah, advanced through the Battle round after performing the Red Clay Strays' Wondering Why with fellow Team Riley contestant Brayden Howell, who is 19.

Mower first turned all four chairs during the Blind Auditions with his performance of Zach Bryan's Something in the Orange. Coach Riley Green paired Mower and Howell for the Battle, with Carly Pearce joining Team Riley as a guest adviser. Before the performance, Mower spoke about the difficulty of being away from his wife, Lindsey, and their two children while filming the competition.

It's been a massive sacrifice, but if I can go and win this Battle, that's one step closer towards making this massive sacrifice worth it, he said. He added that his wife is not just along for the ride but his biggest fan. After the performance, Kelly Clarkson, who had been surprised during Mower's audition to learn that he works full-time as a wealth adviser, praised his voice.

Your vocals are insane, Clarkson told him. Queen Latifah said Mower had been on her brain since he came on the stage and wished he had landed on her team, while also praising Howell, telling the pair Brayden gave Mower a run for his money. Green ultimately selected Mower to advance, praising him for already knowing what he is and what he does well.

Mower has spent nearly 15 years pursuing music alongside a full-time career. According to NBC, he began playing guitar at age 12, started singing shortly before turning 21, and played thousands of shows while living in Austin and Nashville. The Battle win sends Mower into the newly introduced Cut Week as one of seven remaining artists on Team Riley.

Word Treasure

contestant -- A contestant is a person who takes part in a competition.

adviser -- An adviser is someone who gives helpful advice to others.

sacrifice -- A sacrifice is giving up something important for something you care about even more.

vocals -- Vocals are the singing voice you hear in a song.

pursuing -- Pursuing music means working hard over a long time to follow a dream in music.

Background you need

The Voice is a singing contest in which coaches listen to singers and pick artists for their teams.

In the Blind Auditions, coaches turn their chairs when they like a voice, even before they see the singer.

In a Battle round, two singers from the same team sing together, and their coach picks one to move on.

Singers can spend years practising and performing before they get a big chance on a show like this.
